Our most important challenge is making classic brands relevant to new generations via modern communication of social media, food bloggers and other online venues.

Sales divisions are divided into Retail, Fresh Produce and Food Service. All consist of dynamic groups of people providing excellent customer service and building strong customer relationships.

Our sales force is one of the biggest in the Icelandic retail and food service sector focusing only on food products. Within the Retail division we have experts in shelf space management who use their knowledge to spot hot areas and customers' routes within the stores. Sales reps are trained in techniques designed to optimizing shelf space and product visibility within the market, using visual cues, brand blocking and making it easier for the consumer to find his way through the shelves.

In Food Service we have a team educated and trained in the field of cuisine, ranging from chefs and bakers to food technicians. The broad customer base is everything between small canteens to large food producers and top hotels and restaurants.
